ELKS' LODGE SHOWS HONOR TO THE FLAG

In Stirring Speech the History of the Stars and Stripes Is Recounted at Annual Exercises

The honor of a flag which God smiled at and a woman made was lauded at the exercises of the Elks of Honolulu in their club rooms Saturday evening. Tributes were paid to the flag which has caused armies to triumph over their own defeats to bring the emblem of freedom, the flag of the United States, to victory. In stirring speeches its history was recounted, from the hour it was presented to George Washington by the hand of a lady.

The hall was filled with Elks and their friends, who listened to the speech of S. B. Dole, and at its conclusion the first artillery band was present and rendered music. James C. Coker, the exalted ruler of the order, delivered the welcome address, and prayer was offered by O. C. Scott, chaplain of the order. Judge W. J. Robinson led the altar service, depicting the history of the Liberty bell and Lorrin Andrews spoke on "The Elks' Tribute to the Flag."

One Flag for All.

The address of Judge Dole, as orator of the occasion, was ably made. He spoke of the history of the flag, the first one raised in California being on exhibition at the hall Saturday evening, and predicted the glories it will lead to.

He said in part:

"The American flag is a flag not only of growth but of prophecy. The Pilgrim Fathers had founded New England; the Dutch, New York, and the chivalry of England, Virginia and the Carolinas; all seeking room for growth—some religious liberty, some escape from old-world conventions, and some coming in the spirit of adventure—all tired of the exactions and restrictions and limitations of the old world."

"These people, so different from each other in their traditions and manner of living, drew together as the new generations of the new land with its limitless areas, its unexplored forests and the common dangers from hostile aborigines, became one in their love of freedom; and when circumstances called for their Declaration of Independence and the founding of the new government, the common interest fused them practically into one nation. There was no North and South."

George Washington and Israel Putnam were comrades. Samuel Adams and Thomas Jefferson and Benjamin Franklin were co-workers in laying foundations for the new commonwealth.

"The time was full of opportunity. Freedom was in the air. Robert Burns had sung: 'A man's a man for a' that.' Absolutism was crumbling in France. Government by the people was looming up before the world, definite and alluring. The war, when it came, was the people's fight; they did not wait for the Declaration of Independence and it was in this fierce, welding heat of patriotic passion and ardent zeal for the rights of man that the American flag was born. It was the flower of the crisis, the inspiration of the seething, epidemic enthusiasm of the American people, men and women."

Story of the Nation.

"The flag tells the story of our national growth. With thirteen stars at its birth, its number has increased to nearly half a hundred, each star representing a great state. This union of stars in the flag tells of the mighty strength of the federal government, more than two-score of sovereign states united in one system for the perpetuity of which they have yielded a portion of their own authority. A union of two or three political communities is inherently weak as we see from the examples of Sweden and Norway, and of Austria and Hungary. But the security increases with the increase in the number of the federated states. The federal government was too strong for the revolt of the Confederate States in 1861 to be successful. The stars of the revolting states, still on the flag, were constantly exhibited to the Confederate army, the token of the steady faith of the government and of the people behind it, not only that the Union had not disintegrated, but that it would not."

Flag Promises Much.

"I have spoken of the flag as prophetic. When it was first unfurled, this flag of freedom, slavery was a great business institution, so firmly entrenched in nearly one-half of the area of the United States, that no one could see how it was to be eradicated. When, later, the great Constitution of the United States was drafted and adopted, there appeared no opportunity to terminate this national injustice and disgrace, and it had to go on with the flag of freedom flying over millions of slaves and the Constitution silent on the subject. But the flag flew on with its message of hope, educating millions of men in its principles until the time came, after more than three-quarters of a century of weary waiting, to strike the blow that the flag called for, and these millions of slaves were free and received the rights of other Americans."

"There are other things which we may expect under the promise of the flag. White slavery shall be wiped out, women shall have their due, working men laboring by hand or brain shall be delivered from the tyranny of capital and shall be given their need of opportunity."

"And so let us rejoice in the flag. More than in its honorable victories on land and sea, let us be glad in its inspiration to human progress, in its promise of future justice and fair play and for the protection of the weak and innocent—and so let it be Old Glory forever."

MRS. LONGSTREET DENOUNCES BURLESON

Widow of Famous General
Calls Him 'Wilson's Sixty-
Day Postmaster-Genl.'

(Latest Mail.)

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Mrs. Helen D. Longstreet, widow of the noted Confederate general, had a hearing before the senate postoffice committee recently to give her version of the circumstances leading to her displacement as postmistress at Gainesville, Ga. Mrs. Longstreet did not ask reinstatement, but sought to reply to Postmaster-General Burleson's statement that her office was poorly managed. She referred to Burleson as "President Wilson's 60-day postmaster-general."

Mrs. Longstreet declared that she was the victim of the Georgia Railway & Power Company, which, she said, had purged her because she was "too efficient." She presented a long list of endorsements of her administration and asserted that the people of her community who knew her were more competent to judge her than the postmaster-general.

"The immortal commander whose name I bear, who resigned a commission in the American army to follow the banners of the south until the last stainless one was furled at Appomattox and thenceforth found himself an outcast in the land whose battlefield had run red with his heroic blood," declared Mrs. Longstreet, "was not made to suffer more than I have been made to suffer at the hands of that branch of Democracy which is in the saddle in the good old Democratic state of Georgia in the year that has placed a Virginia gentleman in the White House."

ST. LOUIS COLLEGE ALUMNI DATE IS SET

St. Louis College alumni will hold a luncheon and regular annual reunion at St. Louis College dining-hall, on June 21, at 8 o'clock. Ben Hollinger, now president of the association, will probably be toastmaster. At least 200 are expected to attend the dinner, which is one of the notable events of the end of the scholastic year in Honolulu's institutions. The luncheon will be prepared under the supervision of Antonio Kaco, well known for his ability in this direction. Music will be furnished by the St. Louis college orchestra and a Hawaiian orchestra also. Prominent members of the alumni will be called upon for informal speeches or "stunts."

POPULAR THEATRE HAS NEW SERIES

There is a change of program at the Popular theatre for tonight and the selections that are to be thrown on the screen are of much interest and vary from the pathetic to the laughter-making kind. The pictures at this cool little playhouse are among the best that are sent to the islands and the prices of admission are the lowest in the city.

The Popular is extremely popular with the children of the city as any matinee will testify. Take in the popular.

BEFORE BUYING A TRUNK.

First, decide what is to be packed in it, and whether it is to be used for journeys over land, or for sailing over the sea. If a trunk is used for what it is intended, clothes alone, and they are packed with intelligence, they will arrive at their destination unwrinkled.

It is the simplest necessity to put rolls of tissue paper under a skirt which may have to be folded over, to put the sleeves of a gown with tissue and to stuff a little paper into the waists of dresses. An important precaution in the art of packing is to put the heaviest clothes at the bottom. Tissue paper should also be folded between dark and light clothes if freshness is to be expected. Very perishable evening dresses, especially spangled or beaded or—should be packed in thin bags. The most desirable trunks are made in wardrobe style, examples of modern wizardry with their various compartments constructed to hold every article of wearing apparel and keep in perfect condition to the end of the journey.
